“Leadership in threes”: A structured approach to developing leadership, management and followership capabilities.

Presenters: Judy McKimm, Paul Jones, Claire Vogan - Leadership Development Group

Tuesday 5th July 2016

10am - 4pm

Members: £110, Non-member £125, F1/F2/Trainee: £90, UG £70

Our understanding of leadership is changing in education and healthcare as we apply learning from a wide range of literature into our own contexts. We have developed a model (“Leadership in threes”) which provides a structured framework for developing and understanding the knowledge and expertise; skills and personal qualities require to be an effective leader, manager and follower. The framework also offers practical ways to learn and apply these skills at individual, team/group and organisation/system levels.

This workshop aims to:

- Introduce the model and its theoretical underpinnings
- Provide a structured framework and tools to help individuals identify needs and develop leadership, management and followership skills
- Raise awareness of how this approach can be used with learners in different educational settings
- Provide a safe space for thinking and learning about leadership from a personal perspective
- Provide opportunities for personal action planning

The workshop is relevant for individuals at any stage of their career. It is highly interactive and developmental comprising short presentations, case examples, creative thinking techniques and group and individual activities.

Pre-conference workshops on Tuesday 5th July continued

Technology Enhanced learning workshop (TEL SIG)

Presenters: Dominic Alder, e-Learning Materials Developer, Katrina Butcher, General Surgical Registrar, Richard Bamford, General Surgical Registrar, Martin van Eker, Academies IT and Network Manager

Tuesday 5th July 2016

10am - 4pm

Members: £110, Non-member £125, F1/F2/Trainee: £90, UG £70

Creating innovative and engaging eLearning activities and materials can take time and often requires technical skills. Many organisations are now involving their students and trainees in the use of digital technologies to support their curricula, and in particular the development of online learning resources. This workshop will be an interactive, practical guide to how you can engage and harness the creativity of students and learners in developing high-quality sustainable e-learning projects. Framed by a number of case-studies at both undergraduate and trainee level, the workshop will be largely participative with activities using digital tools to create resources. Through reflecting on your practical experiences of the workshop activities, you will develop an insight into the benefits for both teachers and learners, including the range of knowledge and skills (both technical and non-technical) developed, when working in partnership with learners to develop e-learning projects.

The workshop will involve extensive participation from attendees through a variety of interactive activities – brainstorming and small-group work, presenting back to the wider group, etc. A large part of the workshop will involve all attendees using a number of easy to use tools to create simple but effective online interactive exercises, reflecting on the level of knowledge and skills developed.

By the end of this workshop participants should be able to:

- Discuss models for developing interactive e-learning resources through a number of case studies
- Select and plan to use a selection of e-learning tools to develop innovative e-learning resources
- Devise and implement plans for eLearning development projects involving learners

Pre-conference workshops on Tuesday 5th July continued

These workshops need to be registered for prior to attending the ASM. Details are on the ASM registration page including relevant workshop fees.

Undergraduate Surgery Teaching - A Shared Perspective

Presenters: Mr Robin Baker, Mr Stephen Kirk, Prof R Spence & Mr I Walsh

Tuesday 5th July 2016

10am - 4pm

Members: £110, Non-member £125, F1/F2/Trainee: £90, UG £70

The aim of this workshop is to provide an opportunity for academics and teachers involved in the provision of undergraduate surgical training, within the UK and Ireland, to meet and share best practice and knowledge. It will provide an opportunity for surgeons to compare and contrast methods of teaching currently being offered within different medical/healthcare education establishments.

The objectives of the workshop are:

- To disseminate good practice to a wider audience within medical/healthcare education establishments.
- To promote and develop collaboration with other medical/healthcare education establishments across the UK and Ireland.
- To collect and present findings from research regarding undergraduate surgery teaching within medical/healthcare education establishments across the UK and Ireland.
- To improve the quality and efficiency of learning, teaching and assessment in undergraduate surgery teaching.
- To identify areas of future research.
